Get started with making healthy changes!

Healthy Directions is a study for Harvard Vanguard patients who want to make healthy changes, have more energy, and prevent diseases like cancer. By taking part in Healthy Directions, you will learn to set health goals and reach them, one step at a time.

Healthy Directions recommends these 5 healthy habits:

- Walk 10,000 or more steps every day.
- Eat 5 to 9 servings of fruits and vegetables every day.
- Eat no more than 3 servings of red meat a week.
- Take a multivitamin every day.
- Don't smoke.

You may already do some of these things. But no matter how many health habits you want to work on, Healthy Directions will help you get there. In fact, it's actually easier to change more than one health habit at a time!

Healthy Directions will show you ways to make health changes easier. We'll help you to:

- keep track of your health habits, so you can see how you're doing
- make a plan that includes small, manageable steps and ideas for getting past things that might get in your way
- ask friends or family members to be your buddies and help you reach your health goals

We hope to have all of the results by September of 2012.

What will I receive as part of Healthy Directions?

About Healthy Directions

Healthy Directions is a research study that's being conducted by Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates, Harvard Pilgrim Health Care, and Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

The goal of Healthy Directions is to find ways to work with health care providers to help lower their patients' risk of cancer.

Healthy Directions is based on an earlier study that successfully lowered cancer risk factors among Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates patients. This study builds on what we've learned and will help us answer more questions about the best ways to deliver care.

About 3,000 Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates patients will be enrolled in Healthy Directions. Each person will be in the study for about 18 months. Healthy Directions is funded by the National Cancer Institute.
